WHERE DO YOU GO TO SOURCE GREAT ANTIQUE PIECES FOR RESIDENTIAL PROJECTS?

LAPADA Art & Antiques Fair

CLARE PASCOE

Where I source items from depends on the client and project. The options include auctions; furniture fairs and specialist dealer showroom/workshops. I use 1st Dibs, Talisman, Lots Road Auctions and ebay for antiques and I source most of my Mid Century pieces from a network of British and European dealers, which I have built up over my 17 years specialising in Mid Century contemporary interiors.

As soon as I know the brief for a residential project, I know exactly where to go for antique pieces. I work closely with Talisman who have an incredibly varied and stylish collection of cool pieces. Another favourite of mine is Sunbury Antiques Market in Kempton Park, it is the perfect place to discover something unique. The New Craftsman gallery in London is another must as it is full of inspiration for me. It showcases a beautiful collection of glass, pottery, textiles and furniture by craftmakers from all over Britain.

A gradual accumulation of furniture is a lovely way to decorate and luckily in London we are not short of places to go and source. I am regularly on Lillie Rd, SW6 and the Decorative Antiques fair in Battersea. Alfies Antique Market in Marylebone is a wonderful rabbit warren full of dealers selling antiques, objects and collectables but some of my favourites places closer to my Studio in Pimlico are Howe, Rose Uniacke and Gordon Watson.

Church Street Antiques also known as Marylebone Antiques and Alfies Antique Market are my first point of call when sourcing antique pieces for projects. There is such a diverse assortment of truly distinct pieces, from beautiful ceramics and silver tableware to paintings and entire furniture collections that I never leave empty-handed! I also visit Lapada Arts & Antiques Fair every year, another fantastic destination to source unique objects.

ROB LANDEWEERD
Special Umbria

In Italy is not always easy to find nice pieces of antique furniture; you need to know your way around. For a recent project in Umbria we found one of the largest collections of antiques at Sisi Antiquariato in Città di Castello. We also source antiques from the large antique market in Arezzo, Tuscany, which is held the first weekend of every month, it's my favourite! Not forgetting Catawiki.com where we always find nice small decorative antique pieces.
